Question 4

Read the following passage carefully and answer the questions that follow:

Richard Parker was so named because of a clerical error.

A panther was terrorizing the Khulna district of Bangladesh, just outside the Sunderbans. It had recently carried off a little girl. She was the seventh person killed in two months by the animal. It was growing bolder day by day. The previous victim was a man who had been attacked in broad daylight in the field. The beast dragged him off into the forest and his corpse was later found hanging from a tree. The villagers kept a watch that night, hoping to surprise the panther and kill it but it never happened.

The Forest Department hired a professional hunter. He set up a small, hidden platform in a tree near a river where two of the attacks had taken place. A goat was tied to a stake on the river's bank. The hunter waited for several nights. He assumed the panther would be an old, wasted male with worn teeth, incapable of catching anything more difficult than human. Surprisingly, it was a sleek tiger that stepped into the open one night: a female with a single cub. The goat bleated. Oddly, the cub that looked to be about three months old, paid little attention to the goat. It raced to the edge of the water where it drank eagerly. Its mother followed it. Of hunger and thirst, thirst is the greater urge. Only once the tiger had quenched her thirst did she turn to the goat to satisfy her hunger.

The hunter had two rifles with him: one with real bullets, the other with immobilizing darts. The animal was not the man-eater but so close to human habitation that she might pose a threat to the villagers, especially as she was with a cub. He picked up the gun with the darts. He fired as the tiger was about to attack the goat. The tiger reared up and snarled and raced away. Immobilizing darts don't bring on sleep gently –it knocks the creature out without warning. The activities on the animal's part make it act faster. The hunter called his assistants on the radio. They found the tiger about two hundred yards from the river. She was still conscious. Her back legs were given way and her balance on her front legs was shaky. When the men got close, she tried to get away but could not manage it. She turned towards them, lifting a paw that was meant to kill. It only made her lose her balance. She collapsed and the Pondicherry Zoo had two new tigers. The cub was found in a bush close by, meowing with fear.

The hunter whose name was Richard Parker, picked it up with his bare hands and remembering how it had rushed to drink in river, named it Thirsty. Unfortunately, the shipping clerk at the Howrah station was evidently a man both confused and diligent. All the papers received with the cub clearly stated that its name was Richard Parker. It also stated that the hunter's first name was Thirsty and his surname was 'None Given'. Richard Parker's name was fixed. I don't know if the hunter was ever called Thirsty None Given.
